

Office of the Mayor
City of Fayetteville
Proclamation

WHEREAS: the sweat and skill of American workers build this country and preserve it through wars and crises, and organized labor serves not just its own members but all people through its century-long struggle for social and economic justice, and

WHEREAS: American workers carry us through times of challenge and uncertainty, propel America through eras of peace and prosperity, and form the backbone of our Nation's economy, and

WHEREAS: working Americans construct our cities and towns, and with unparalleled skill they manufacture the goods and provide the services needed by Americans and people around the world. They prepare our children for the challenges ahead and care for the sick and the elderly, and

WHEREAS: the labor movement has given voice to the aspirations and concerns of millions of men and women. By fighting for decent working conditions, as well as fair wages and benefits, organized labor stands for the rights of everyday Americans. With determination and commitment, labor champions for all working families and all people benefit from the fruits of their struggles, and

WHEREAS: the National Labor Relations Act grants employees the right to form or join unions and engage in protected activities to address or improve working conditions helping to create jobs that pay a living wage and provide a better life for all, and

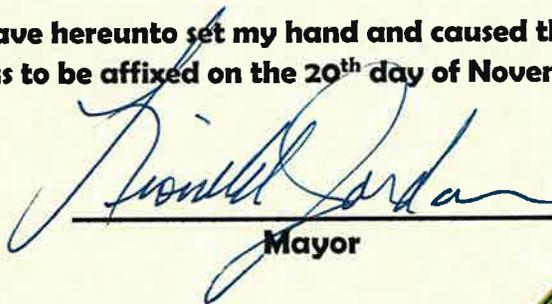

WHEREAS: the National Labor Relations Board safeguards employees' rights to organize and prevents and remedies unfair labor practices,

NOW THEREFORE, I, Lioneld Jordan, Mayor of the City of Fayetteville, Arkansas do hereby proclaim Sunday, November 20 and Monday, November 21, 2016 as in Fayetteville, Arkansas as we honor his work and dedicated leadership of the National Labor Relations Board and thank him for bringing his expertise to share with the students at the University of Arkansas School of Law.
